Sampling

Sampling Procedure

The survey was conducted using a two-stage sampling method, which gives an equal probability of selection of households. This means that the data are fully comparable with the RHS 1998. The sample frame comprised the listings of households prepared annually in bags and khoroo across the country. Activities designed for improving the quality of data of the sample frame were conducted in the fourth quarter of 2002 and the first quarter of 2003. The actual sampling was based on the 2003 first half-year data.

Total	8400

It was determined from the experience of RHS 1998, and of other countries which have conducted similar surveys, that 25-30 households per cluster would provide an optimum representation. Therefore, this time 30 households were selected for a cluster (The best cluster "take" depends upon the intra-cluster versus inter-cluster heterogeneity of the principal variables being measured; this can only be determined after carrying out a survey). For the survey it was planned to select 8,400 households, which is a 1.47 percent sample of all households in the country. This implied the selection of 280 clusters of households. Bags and khoros were the primary sampling units (PSUs). All 1,674 PSUs were stratified implicitly by aimag and soum, and the selection of the 280 sample PSUs (or clusters) was done systematically with a random start, with probability proportional to the number of registered households. Households were then selected systematically with a random start within each PSU, using an interval directly proportional to the number of households in the PSU. The selected households were interviewed using the household schedule. All women between the ages of 15 and 49, inclusive, who slept in the household's dwelling the night prior to interview, were eligible to be interviewed using the women's interview schedule. Three husbands out of five married women interviewed in each PSU were interviewed using the husband's interview schedule.

Questionnaires

Overview

There were three questionnaires used in the RHS. For the development of women's questionnaire, the model 'B' of the Demographic and Health Surveys Program served as a base, with some adjustments that reflect Mongolia's specific needs. The contents of the three questionnaires are outlined briefly below :

Household Questionnaire:

Relationship to the household head;

Age;

Sex;

Educational level;

Marital status.

These questions were asked from all household members and people who slept in the household prior to the interview. The household questionnaire was developed in order to obtain general demographic information, information on household amenities and housing conditions, household income and expenditure, and as a tool for selecting women and husbands for individual interview.

Woman's Questionnaire:

Background questions, marital status;

Reproduction;

Maternal health, pregnancy, breastfeeding, child health, abortion, miscarriage and stillbirth in the last five years;

Knowledge, access to and use of contraceptive methods;

Fertility preferences;

Employment, and questions concerning the husband

Knowledge about STIs and AIDS.

Husband's Questionnaire:

Background questions;

Reproduction;

Knowledge, access to and use of contraceptive methods;

Knowledge about STIs and AIDS.

DATA COLLECTION NOTES

From 10 August to 1 September 2003, training was held for interviewers. Each team consisted of 4 female interviewers, a male interviewer. Data collection activities started with the appointment of 10 teams with 7 members in each. When the data collection activities started winter was very near, therefore, it was planned to first cover the mountainous west and forested regions of the country, then Gobi and central regions and lastly Ulaanbaatar city. Data collection started on 4 September and terminated 26 December 1998. Data collection progress was reported weekly to the survey headquarters at the NSO. A number of persons from aimag, city, soum, district, baghs or horoos (around 560 persons in cumulative number) provided great assistance and collaboration during the fieldwork operation.

SUPERVISION

Each team consisted an editor and a supervisor. Editors were appointed for each team, so that editors and supervisors were able to edit questionnaires daily and correct them by going back to the households when necessary. This way of organizing fieldwork ensured high quality and reliable information.

Data Processing

Data Editing

The computer data entry work was initiated on 20 October 2003 and terminated 1 March 2004. The editing of the computer files was finished by the middle of April. The computer software package, "Integrated System for Survey Analysis" (ISSA), created by Macro International, Inc. was used in data entry and processing. During February 2004, output tables were produced over a period of 4 months. Activities such as data entry, quality control and production of output tables were accomplished by the national staff under the supervision and guidance of an adviser from the UNFPA Country Support Team in Bangkok. The main report of RHS was prepared jointly by the experts of the NSO, MOH, and the researchers working in agencies under the MOH.

Data Appraisal

Estimates of Sampling Error

Sampling errors are presented in Tables B.02 - B.16 for variables considered to be of major interest. Results are presented for the whole country, for urban and rural areas separately, for each of four education groups, for each of five regions, and for each of three age groups. For each variable, the type of statistic (percentage, mean or rate) and the base population are given in Table B.01. For each variable, Tables B.02 - B.16 present the value of the statistic (R), its standard error (SE), the number of cases (N) where relevant, the design effect (DEFT) where applicable, the relative standard error (SE/R), and the 95 percent confidence limits (R-2SE, R+2SE).

The confidence limits have the following interpretation. For the percentage of currently married women using the contraceptive intrauterine device (IUD), the overall value for the full sample is 32.8%, and its standard error is 0.7%. Therefore, to obtain the 95 percent confidence limits, one adds and subtracts twice the standard error to the sample estimate, which means that there is a high probability (95 percent) the true percentage currently using the IUD is between 31.3% and 34.2%.

The relative standard errors for most estimates for the country as a whole are small, except for estimates of very small percentages. The magnitude of the error increases as estimates for sub-populations such as geographical areas are considered. For the variable IUD, for instance, the relative standard error (as a percentage of the estimated parameter) for the whole country and for urban and rural areas is 2.2 percent, 3.2 percent, and 3.0 percent, respectively. For the five regions, the relative standard error of the variable IUD varies between 3.9 percent and 7.4 percent.

Special mention should be made of the sampling errors for rates. The denominators are exposure-years, and the numerators are either births or deaths in the population under consideration during the indicated period of time. Estimates of sampling errors are shown for the TFR in the three years prior to the survey, presented in Chapter 3, and for the various 3-year mortality rates presented in Chapter 7. These estimates are calculated at the national level, and by urban-rural residence, region, and mother's educational level. (They are irrelevant for age groups)

It should be noted that the survey indicates, with a 95 percent level of confidence, that the TFR for the 3-year period prior to the survey lay between 2,4 and 2,6 children per woman, and that the infant mortality rate for the 3-year period prior to the survey lay between 23 and 35 per thousand births. The differences between the survey results and registration statistics are not due to sampling variability.

Details of the sampling errors are presented in the appendix B to the national report RHS 2003 of the external resources.

Type: Discrete
 Format: numeric
 Width: 2
 Decimals: 0
 Range: 1-30

Valid cases: 36207
 Invalid: 0
 Minimum: 1

Description

A household may be one person or a group of persons who usually live and eat together. This is not the same as a family.

Source of information

A family includes only people who are related, but a household includes any people who live together, whether or not they are related. For example, three unrelated men who live and cook meals together would not be considered one family, but they would be considered to be members of the same household.
